The following are suggestions given based on the Revision file that has been uploaded:

1. Integrate relevant theories on education, moderation, or social harmony. For example: The Social Learning Theory (Bandura) could frame how students learn moderation through modeled behaviors in madrasahs. The Peace Education Framework could provide a lens for understanding the role of education in reducing extremism and fostering tolerance.
2. Expand the methods section to include: Specifics about how interview questions were developed and analyzed. The process of triangulation and how it strengthened the reliability of the data. Justification for the sampling size and selection criteria for students and teachers.
3. Enhance Data Analysis and Integration: Quantitative data (e.g., the 80.8% awareness score) should be interpreted in more depth, explaining its significance and comparing it with similar studies. Qualitative findings should include direct quotes from interviews to illustrate key themes. Discuss how the findings contribute to existing research on religious moderation.
4. Include references to global literature on similar initiatives (e.g., peace education in conflict zones, interfaith programs in schools) to position the study within a broader academic context.
5. Provide a more detailed analysis of challenges such as social media influence and teacher resistance. Discuss specific interventions (e.g., teacher training programs, collaborations with tech platforms to filter radical content).
6. Strengthen the Abstract and Conclusion: Rewrite the abstract to succinctly capture the study's purpose, methods, findings, and implications. Use the conclusion to reflect critically on the study's contributions and limitations, offering clear directions for future research.
