Main Supervisor : Prof. Dr. Jarjani, M.Sc., M.S.
Co-Supervisor : Fera Busfina Zalha, M.A.
Keywords : Initial speech function, responding speech function, Freedom Writers movie

This study aims to analyze the types of speech function in the Freedom Writers movie, including both the initial speech function and responding speech function. The part of the movie script which is taken as the object data is limited to teacher-student interaction only. The method utilized was a qualitative one with content analysis approach, which aims to provide descriptive responses to research questions. Speech function in this study was analyzed using Halliday's Systemic Functional Linguistic (SFL) theory. Results show that all of four types appear in the initial speech function whereas two types disappear in the responding speech function. Specifically, in the initial speech function, all of types appear including statement, question, command, and offer. Initial speech function is dominated by the occurrence of statement. Meanwhile, in responding speech function, six types appear including acknowledgement, answer, distraction, contradiction, refusal, and rejection whereas two of the eight types disappear including acceptance and compliance. Responding speech function is dominated by answer as the most frequent type.

INTRODUCTION

This chapter presents the introduction of the research. This chapter consists of background of study, research question, aim of the study, scope of the study, research significance, and terminology.

A. Background of Study

Language has an important role in everyday life for humans to interact with each other. Language is an arbitrary system of speech sound that is used or can be utilized in interpersonal communication by an aggregation of human beings and exhaustively catalogs items, processes, and occurrences in human environment (Ramelan, 2003). People can express their ideas and feeling using language in a communication. In communication, the way someone conveyed ideas to make their addressees understand the ideas well is called speech function. Speech function is the exchange between speaker and listener in a communication.

In systematic functional grammar, according to Halliday (2014), there are two functions of speech generally; they are giving and demanding. These two functions are then specified into four primary forms of speech functions. The function of giving is divided into statement and offer whereas demanding is divided into question and command. In addition to the four main speech functions, there is a response from the speech called the responding speech function which is broadly divided into two, namely supporting and confronting.

Speech function can be found in a conversation. Not only through face to face communication, speech function can also be found in conversation on media such as books, short stories, movies, etc. Movie is one of the mediums that contain utterances in form of dialog (Purba, Febi, Vebriati, & Herman, 2021). Through dialog in this medium, speech function can be found in the utterances of the actors. Movie is the subject used in this study. Movies are divided into various types of genres such as horror, action, comedy, adventure, drama, etc (Hoang, 2018). Education movie is also one of the types of movie genre which is well known and liked by many people. Accordingly, this study used an educational movie as its object analysis, specifically Freedom Writers which was released in 2007.

There are several theory have been used in investigated speech function on movie. Some of them are: Brown's (1983) theory which divides speech functions into eight, namely: instrumental, regulatory, representational, interactional, personal, heuristic, imaginative, and metalinguistic, Holmes and Wilson's (2017) theory which divides speech function into referential, expressive, directive, phatic, metalinguistic, and phoetic, and Halliday (2014) theory which divided speech function into statement, question, command, and offer. According to Davidse (2018), Halliday may truly be termed a 'universal linguist'. Halliday's thought has shed new light on the world of linguistics, particularly the greatest impact in the field of semantics or discourse (Davidse, 2018). As a result, this study is interested in employing Halliday's theory as a theory to analyse the determined subject.

Some previous studies of speech function on movies using Halliday's theory (2014) have been conducted. One of the studies was by Finanti and Cahyono (2022), which have been conducted the study to examined speech functions used by the main character of Frozen II movie. In the study it was found that the most occurrence type is in the form of statement. The statement in this movie helps the main character to generate the movie's ideas and conflicts and builds the character to be recognisable. Rahayu, Rozak, and Ermawati (2022) also conducted the study which examined speech function from the movie. That study identified the largest percentage of speech function found in the Raya and The Last Dragon is statement with 106 utterances.

Although many studies have been done on the speech function on the movies, the movies that have been studied tend to have the same genre, particularly fantasy animation movie and usually focused only on the main character. Some of them are the study by Tarigan (2018), which focused in examining speech function by the main characters in fantasy animation movie entitled Moana, and the study conducted by Dwiningtyas, Krisnawati, & Malini (2020) which analysed the Over the Moon movie. The study focused in identifying the most used speech function by the main character. Therefore, distinct from previous study, this study chose speech function on American educational movie which focused on teacher-student interaction to be analysed. According to (Mahendra & Zulham, 2017), the analysis and the use of speech functions are very useful in our lives, especially in the teaching and learning process.

B. Research Question

This study intends to address the following research question:

1. What are the types of initial speech function used in Freedom Writers movie?
2. What are the types of responding speech function used in Freedom Writers movie?

C. The Aim of Study

Related to the research questions formulated above, the aims of this research are:

1. To find out the types of initial speech function used in Freedom Writers movie.
2. To find out the types of responding speech function used in Freedom Writers movie.

D. Scope of the Study

This study is limited to interpersonal function analysis by focusing on speech function, which are the initial speech function and responding speech function. The material of analysis was in form of movie script derived from American movie entitled Freedom Writers and the focus of the analysis is limited on analyzing the teacher-students interaction in the movie, either in the classroom or beyond the classroom. Of all characters, the discourse analyzed was only from the teacher and student characters, who are Erin Gruwell as the teacher, and the students whom Erin taught in her class.

E. Research Significance

The data form in this study comes from an American movie, which uses English as the native language in its conversation. The language delivery in the movie will be done by native speakers, so that the analysis on it is expected can help students create how English is used more accurately and encourage students to be proficient in the use of English (Bilal, 2012). Furthermore, this study chose the teacher-student interaction as a scope of the study. The teacher-student interaction is chosen in order students can explore how language is utilized to achieve communicative interaction depending on the context (Bilal, 2012). Besides, this study took Freedom Writers movie because it is one of the famous movies that has been widely researched, but there is no research that discusses speech functions on it. Choosing this movie which based on a true story is expected to add insight into how people should behave in the community in culturally accepted manner.

F. Terminology

In this part, there are several forms which are explained to avoid misunderstanding. The terms are speech function, movie, and Freedom Writers.

1. Speech Function

According to Tarigan and Natsir (2014), speech function is a way for someone to communicate ideas in such a way that listeners can understand them. Speech function is used to carry out acts or performances by language users, such as asking, commanding, and answering, in order to accomplish the speakers' and listeners' purposes. There are four types of speech functions which are: statement, question, command, and offer. All of the types of speech functions mentioned above are the focus of this research. In addition to the four main speech functions, there is a reaction or response to the speech function which is called the responding speech function which can be classified as supporting and confronting which also the focus of the analysis of the subject taken in this study.

2. Movie

Movie or motion picture also known as film is a story told through a series of moving images on a screen, generally with sound. A film is a collection of moving images that have been captured for projection in a theater or on television. A film can either tell a story or depict a real-life scene. This definition is in line with that conveyed by Shabrina (2019), film is a medium that combines quotes and moving images. The movie chosen for this study is Freedom Writers movie. It is a 2007 American movie written and directed by Richard LaGravenese and distributed by Paramount Pictures.

CHAPTER II

LITERATURE REVIEW

This chapter briefly describes the theory underpinning the research on the analysis of speech function. This chapter tries to deepen understanding of the subject under the research. There are a few pertinent subjects covered, including systemic functional linguistics, speech function, speech function in movies, and Freedom Writers movie.

A. Systemic Functional Linguistic

Systemic Functional Linguistic (SFL), also called systemic functional grammar or systemic grammar, is an idea that was introduced in the early 1960s by Michael Alexander Kirkwood Halliday (Wiratno, 2018). Halliday is a professor of linguistics who was concerned with linguistic performance which is often used in sociolinguistics, psycholinguistics, ethnolinguistics, discourse analysis, language teaching, and second language acquisition. The word Systemic in SFL refers to a conception of language as a network of systems or choices for expressing meaning and the word Functional in the terminology refers to a concern for what language does and how it does it, in contrast to more structural approaches (Flowerdew, 2013). Thus, SFL is a branch of linguistics that is concerned in how to select language forms in the context of using language as text.

In linguistic maps, formal terms and functional terms are frequently contrasted. The first term refers to the flow that is categorized under functional linguistics and is typically analogous to the flow of linguistics developed by Halliday. On the other hand, the second term refers to the flow that is classed under formal linguistics, and is typically analogous to the flow of linguistics pioneered by linguists in America, Noam Chomsky. The two groups can be identified from one another by examining the respective points of view. According to Wiratno (2018), functional groupings have their origins in viewpoints of language as a function with an emphasis on rhetoric and ethnography. The formal group's foundations lay in a point that views language as a form with a focus on logic and philosophy.

Systemic Functional Linguistic theory which was developed by Halliday views language as a social phenomenon, in which language tends to be a tool for doing rather than knowing something (Sinar, 2008). Since its inception, SFL has grown as a theory of language in the field of grammar centered on language functions (Yuwono, 2019). This means that SFL seeks to understand how language functions in the context of situations. Language is semiotic. Unlike general semiotics which consists of meaning, the semiotics of language is social semiotics which consists of the elements of meaning, form, and expression (Saragih, 2007). Halliday (2014) views the concept of semiotics as a choice in the system to obtain meaning against an existing background. This relates to the use of language that is adapted to the context of the meaning. Semiotic systems related to semantic complexity give rise to language metafunctions in linguistic units (Eggins, 2004).

Language metafunction is the main function of language. There are three main functions of language, namely ideational function, interpersonal function, and textual function. These three functions are called metafunctional (Wiratno, 2018). The first metafunction – the ideational – has two components: the experiential and the logical. The addressers use the experiential metafunction of language as a tool to construct their experience of the world, which includes both the outer world of physical phenomena and the inner world of their consciousness, feelings, beliefs, and reflections. The second metafunction – the interpersonal – The addresser uses the resource as a tool to develop and maintain social bonds and to express social roles, including the communication roles that language itself has established. The third metafunction of language – the textual – the addresser using a resource to create "texts" or related discourse passages that are situationally relevant (Martin & Rose, 2013).

These three functions, even though they are different, yet, actually they are a unity. All three are part of one metafunction unit. Therefore, a linguistic utterance, for example in the form of a clause, carries out these three functions at once. In other words, even though the form of the clause is only one, that one clause must be seen from its capacity which has three functions at once (Wiratno, 2018). It means that language is not simply having one single meaning. However, these in line with what Halliday (1989) revealed, language is multifunctional.

1. Ideational metafunction

Ideational metafunction indicates using language to talk about the world (Thompson, 2014). The contents and concepts are primarily what conceptual meanings are concerned with. The ideational meanings are the ones that have to do with how people express things in language. People always use language talking about something or someone doing something. The ideational metafunction is the function for construing human experience. It is the means by which humans made sense of "reality" (Nasution, 2018).

Halliday (2014) divides the ideational into the logical and the experiential function. The experiential function refers to the grammatical resources involved in construing the flux of experience through the unit of the clause. From the experiential perspective, language comprises a set of resources for referring to entities in the world and the ways in which those entities act on or relate with one another. Meanwhile, the logical metafunction concerns the types of connections people establish between the messages. The logical metafunction refers to the grammatical resources to build up grammatical units into complexes (Nasution, 2018). The logical metafunction make it possible to produce more complex configurations in which two or more clauses are joined into a larger whole (Thompson, 2014).

The pattern of experiential (ideational) meaning is realized by transitivity system. Transitivity is the mechanism or system for describing the entire clause, not simply the verb and its object. As stated by Hancock (2005), transitivity refers to the way that the verb conveys meaning from the subject to the predicate.

According to Eggins (2004), these forming aspects of the transitivity system are: participants, process, and circumstance configuration, indicating the real-life experience of who is doing what, to whom, when, where, why, and how. The following is a description of each component:

1) Participants.

Participants are individuals, ideas, or objects that take part in a process. Processes are carried out by participants in certain situations. Nominal groups realize the participants. Participant labels change depending on the procedures they are exposed to.

2) Process.

The term "process" refers to the linguistic, mental, and physical acts as well as the states of being and having. The clause's verbal group realizes the process.

3) Circumstances

Circumstances are the settings in which processes take place. Circumstances also provide answers to when, where, why, how many, and in what capacity. Prepositional phrases or adverbial clusters are used to represent circumstantial components.

2. *Interpersonal Metafunction

The interpersonal metafunction of a speech represents the way the addresser and the audience interact, the use of language to establish and maintain relations between them, to influence their behavior, to express our own viewpoint on things in the world, and to elicit or change theirs (Ye, 2010). This meaning represents the speaker's meaning potential as an intruder that takes the account the interactive nature of relations between the addresser (speaker/writer) and the addressee (listener/reader). As Halliday (2014) conveys, whenever two people use language to interact, one of the things they do with it is establishing a relationship between them.

Halliday & Matthiesen (2004) categorize interpersonal function as an exchange. This exchanging may be an offer, a command, a declarative, or an interrogative. This metafunction is realized at two levels namely at the level of discourse or semantics which is term speech function and lexicogrammar which is term mood (Tarigan & Natsir, 2014). At the level of semantic, language covers two roles in human interaction, namely giving and demanding. The commodity exchange may be either information or goods and services. To indicate that interpersonal metafunction is related to the use of language as an exchange, it can be realized through doing mood and modality analysis. Mood and modality are two tools to see the purpose of utterance and to figure out the speaker's opinion, commitment, or attitude in interpersonal function analysis. Mood shows how the text producer builds a relationship with the text receiver through four basic speech functions, and modality is a complement to mood since it conveys the speaker's attitude toward the likelihood or necessity of the proposition, which is achieved by modal verbs (Kristianti, 2021).

Mood serves as the clause's main meaning as an exchange which is divided into Mood and Residue (Ilham, 2019). The most fundamental purposes in any exchange are giving (and taking) or demanding (and being given) a commodity of some kind (Thompson, 2014). The exchange will only be successful if a non-verbal action is carried out, if the listener obeys the command. For such cases it is needed to include another ‘commodity’ that being exchange what Halliday and Matthiessen (2014) call ‘good & services’. All of it then ends up with four basic speech roles: giving information, demanding information, giving goods & services, and demanding goods & services. Those four functions are statement, question, offer, and command which are called speech functions.

By doing mood analysis, then, the thought commodity that is being exchanged in interaction can be reviewed. The example by Drogba and Humprey (2005) can be seen in the table below.

Tabel 2.1

Structuring Clause for Interaction

Ways of interacting	Type of clause	Example
1. To give information	Statement (declarative)	Sideways has great coffee
2. To ask for information	Question (interrogative)	Who makes the best coffee around here?
3. To ask someone to do something	Command (imperative)	Get me a coffee

Table above explains that types of clauses shows ways of interaction. The term of type of clause is the same as mood. The mood indicates the type of commodity exchange in interaction. The interaction involves roles, relationship, and feeling between addresser and addressee.

3. Textual Metafunction

The textual function is related to the function of a clause as a carrier of information. Thus, a clause is a unit of information. Information, in the grammatical area, by Halliday (2014) is viewed from two sides. First, information is what is known or can be predicted and what is not known or predictable. Such limitations are on the part of the speaker or reader. Secondly, on the other hand, information is also what is chosen as the point of departure for the discussion and what is conveyed later. Such limitations are on the part of the speaker or writer. The first limitation is marked grammatically by the structure of information, which is a configuration of old information and new information. The second constraint is characterized by the thematic structure, which is the Theme-Rheme configuration.

Textual meaning refers to how the text is arranged as a piece of writing or speech (Eggins, 2004). The textual metafunction is described as the relevance or the enabling metafunction that permits the level of organization of the clause which enables the clause to be packaged in ways that make it effective given its purpose and its context (Halliday, 1974). The textual meanings can be realized using grammatical theme pattern and is associated with the mode of the text. According to Halliday and Matthiesen (2004), each clause has a Theme and a Rheme as its message of structure, and the arrangement of the clauses—with the Theme coming first—expresses the structure. The idea represented by the element at the beginning of the clause might be thought of as the theme in English, which is a straightforward definition. It might be described as the starting point of the message. After the theme, the rheme is realized, which can be thought of as being the remainder of the message (Bloor & Bloor, 1998).

B. Speech Function

In the discourse structure patterns, the speech functions choice is a key resource for negotiating degrees of familiarity. In this, Halliday (2014) explains that dialogue is a process of exchange involving two variables: 1) a commodity to be exchanged, such as information or goods and services, and 2) roles related to exchange relations, such as giving or demanding. Giving means encouraging to give, the speaker is providing something to the listener for example a piece of information and demanding means demanding to give, the speaker is demanding something from the listener (Martanto, 2014).

According to Halliday (2014), there are four main sorts of speech functions: offer, statement, command, and question. The four basic speech functions are related to both the exchanged process. These basic speech functions are used to interact and negotiate with others. Almost all of the language used in everyday interactions with others can be accounted for by these four basic speech functions. Every speech function that occurs during a conversation must involve both a speech role and a commodity choice. The four fundamental "moves" can be employed to start a conversation can be identified by cross-classifying the two dimensions of "speech role" and "commodity". It can be seen more clearly from the table by Saragih (2013) below.

Table 2.2Speech Roles and Commodity Exchange*

Speech Role	Commodity Exchange
	Information	Goods and Services
Giving	Statement	Offer
Demanding	Question	Command

The table above describes two classifications of interpersonal meaning, namely the role of speech and commodities exchange. Role in exchange consists of giving which contains offer which is part of commodity on goods and services and statement which is part of commodity on information, and demanding which contains command which is part of commodity on goods and services and question which is part of commodity on information.

As previously mentioned, the exchanges between speech roles and commodities can take place in a conversation. The spoken exchange of thoughts, observations, opinions, or feelings between individuals is referred to as conversation. According to Nurfaidah (2015), the fundamental characteristic of a conversation is that it involves at least two speakers interacting with one another. This particular aspect of human nature has also become the subject of analytic research. Numerous research projects have been undertaken by linguist, psychologist, and sociologists. Conversation Analysis (CA) is one of the tools employed in the research.

In conversation analysis, the process by which an orderly discussion often proceeds is referred to as turn-taking. According to Schegloff (2007), turn taking occurs when the speaker and hearer switch places. It is the points at which the speaker changes roles and lets the listener speak next. In conversation, turn taking is strongly related to move. Move is a unit after which speaker changes can occur without turn shifting. A unit called "move" is used to express speech in discourse. There is one speech function in every move the speaker makes. After that, by scrutinizing every turn and move of the speaker, the researcher can determine the amount of speech functions used by speakers.

1. The Four Basic of Speech Function

Speech function can be defined as the way in which speakers convey ideas so that listeners can grasp the idea. By classifying the dimensions of speech role and commodity exchange, it can be identified four fundamental 'moves' called basic speech function. The four speech functions are described as below.

a. Statement

Statements are often interpreted as providing information that can contain positive or negative statements. Statements usually end with a period (.). Each basic function is tightly tied to a certain grammar. According to (Thompson, 2014) statements are most readily conveyed by declarative. These are utterances example of statements provided by Anugratamur (2013):

[1] "By the time the police we called had smashed the window and entered the room, it wouldn't have seemed so strange."

[2] “Apparently, he was just bowled over by my wonderful self’s genius deductions.”

The two sentences above show the speaker expressing the opinion with a clear statement. The sentence is an example of a speaker conveying new information to the addressee. These two sentences are statement because the exchange that occurs is giving information.

b. Question

A question is a linguistic term that is used to request information. Questions are commonly posed or asked using interrogative sentences. Questions are most naturally articulated with interrogatives in terms of grammatical structure (Thompson, 2014). It is also emphasized that there is another typical type of question that is declarative in particular circumstances. ‘Queclarative’ is the term used by Thompson (2014) to describe this type, which combines declarative and interrogative language. Frequently, this kind of question does not require for a response. The example of questions can be seen in following utterance as provided by Anugratamur (2013).

[1] “How did they get this fat Ol’ Ishiguri-san’s body to the door without leaving any marks on the floor?”

[2] “Was he in the room at the time?”

The example sentence above ends with a question mark which means the addresser demands information from the addressee. The sentence begins with a WH-Question and continues with the content that the speaker wants to find/ask for. The exchange that occurs on these sentences is demanding information.

c. Command

Command is orders to be followed. The speaker demands the addressee to do what is told, either demanding information or demanding something to be done. The most common way to convey commands grammatically is using imperatives (Thompson, 2014). These are the example of command provided by Martanto (2014).

[1] “Great idea, you start!”

[2] “Tell me about the story of Naruto”

The first example shows that speakers order addressee to do something. While in the second example sentence, the addressee is required to provide information. The role exchange used is demanding with goods & services commodity.

d. Offer

Offer is defined as an expression of availability to give or do something. Offer means willing to serve or inform someone. Offers, according to Thompson (2014), are the outlier since they are not connected to a particular mood choice. This is because an offer can be made without utilizing language, in accordance with Halliday and Matthiessen (2014). The words spoken do not always determine how well an offer is received. The following utterance is the example of offer provided by Martanto (2014).

[1] “Here, let me pour that for you”

[2] “Let me help you out with that”

In the example above, the speaker offers to do something for the recipient. Speech Function in the sentence is an offer with the role exchange giving and goods & service commodity.

2. *The Speech Function Responses

As mentioned previously that speech function covers statement, question, command, and offer, Halliday (2014) propose alternative responses for those speech functions which can be broadly differentiated as either supporting or confronting.

1) Supporting Responses

Supporting responses provide agreement and consensus. Supporting moves include, for example, acknowledging a statement, answering a question, accepting an offer, and complying with a command. Supporting responses tend to close off the exchange, as the proposition has been resolved.

a. Acknowledgement

Acknowledgment means acceptance of the information provided. Addressee does not refute the statement given. Martanto (2014) provides the example of acknowledgement as below:

Statement [1] “I hate it when a guy calls a girl who did not give him her number.”

[2] “So this is me not calling.”

Acknowledgement [1] “Yes, You’re right”

[2] “This is much less invasive”

Above is an example of a statement which was later confirmed by the addressee. This is an example of a clear acknowledgment, where the addressee accepts the statement and even supports the statement.

b. Answer

Answer is a form of good response to a question. Answer means give a reply to the requested information. Syamsiyah (2018) provides the example of answer as following:

Question [1] “So, what can I bring you from the market?”

Answer [1] “A rose, like the one in the painting.”

From the example, it can be seen that the addressee clearly and straightforwardly answer the question asked. The response is in the form of supporting the question.

c. Compliance

Compliance is the act of obeying the command. The addresser demands the addressee some responding goods and services and the addressee complies the command. Here the example of compliance as written by Nasution (2018):

Command [1] “Drink it!”

Compliance [1] “All right.”

The example shows that when the command is issued, the command is immediately obeyed without any rebuttal. It shows that the addressee agree to carry out the demands requested. The response sentence that appears is supporting the command.

d. Acceptance

Acceptance is an act of consenting to take or receive something offered. The examples of acceptance are provided as below (Martanto, 2014):

Offer [1] “didn't know what you were drinking, so I got a grande cap, a latte, an Earl Grey tea, and something with "chai" in the little.

Acceptance [1] “Tea for me”

The other example:

Offer [2] “You might need these”

Acceptance [2] “All right”

The two examples above show a response in the form of supporting an offer. In the first example the addressee chooses one of the offered, while in the second example the addressee immediately accepts what is offered. The two examples are in the form of acceptance.

2) Confronting Responses

Confronting responses represent disagreement or non-compliance. For example, disclaiming a question, contradicting a statement, rejection an offer and refusing a command.

a. Contradiction

Contradiction is a sign of disagreement with an information or statement. Contradiction often takes the form of denial and presenting opposite statement. Anugratamur (2013) provides the example of contradiction as below:

Statement	[1] “Ishiguri had recorded everything on video and uploaded it onto the internet, so Uriu got pretty depressed.”
Contradiction	[1] “but that guy got so scared he just burst into tears.”

The example above shows that when a statement is presented, the addressee shows his disagreement by presenting a denial sentence. The form of responding speech function from the response sentence above is confronting the statement.

b. Disclaimer

Disclaimer is a statement to deny something. Disclaimer is also used to refuse when requires to give an answer. These are the example of disclaimer taken from Beauty and the Beast dialog mentioned by Syamsiyah (2018):

Question [1] “Will you join me for dinner?”

Disclaimer [1] “You've taken me as your prisoner and now you want to have dinner with me?”

The other example (Syamsiyah (2018):

Question [2] “Shall I join you this evening?”

Disclaimer [2] “Sorry, not this evening”

The examples show that the questions asked is answered with a non-positive statement. The addressee refused what is asked. The response sentence of the two examples above is confronting the question.

c. Refusal

Refusal is an act of rejecting. It is the act when someone absolutely will not do something ordered. The example of refusal can be seen as below (Anugratamur, 2013):

Command [1] “Tell me about Henry James, please.”

Refusal [1] “Sorry, I can’t tell about it”

In the sample sentence it is shown that when the addresser gives a command, the addressee rejects what is requested. The response sentence is a form of confronting the initial speech function.

d. Rejection

Rejection is a dismissing. Rejection means refusing the offer given. It is an act of refusing to accept what is offered. Nasution (2018) provides the example of rejection as below:

Offer	[1] “Just give me your daughter's hand, and I'll set you free.
Rejection	[1] “Never”

From the example can be seen, the first sentence in the form of an offer which is then welcomed with a sentence of rejection. The response is a form of confronting an offer.

Conclusively, all those speech functions and responding speech functions proposed by Halliday (2014) can be seen briefly in the table provided by Halliday & Matthiessen (2004) as below:

Tabel 2.3Initiating and Responding Speech Function*

Initiating Speech Function	Responding Speech Function
	Supporting	Confronting
Question (Have you ever read Harry Potter novel?)	Answer (Yes, I have)	Disclaimer (I really wouldn't know)
Statement (The Harry Potter is a novel by J.K Rowling)	Acknowledgement (Yea, I know)	Contradiction (I think you're wrong)
Offer (May I help you?)	Acceptance (Sure)	Rejection (I can do it by myself)
Command (Tell me about J.K. Rowling, please)	Compliance (Ok.)	Refusal (Sorry, I can't tell about it.)

The table above shows various forms of speech function and the examples. Initial Speech Function is a basic speech function, while responding speech function is a speech function of the response to the previous four basic speech functions. Responding Speech Function consists of two types namely supporting and confronting forms. Each basic speech function has two types of response as written above.

C. Freedom Writers Movie

Movie is an art and a medium that convey a story or event recorded by a camera as set of moving images (Li, Lee, & Yeh, 2006). By watching movies, people can get inspiration, ideas, knowledge, and learn some new from the movies. Movie is an audiovisual medium that can be used to develop the attitudes, emotions, and evolving the problems. Movie is a medium of communication that rich in social implications and created within different social, historical, and cultural contexts (Afdilah, 2015). According to Champbell and Shafto (2015), movie has the ability to transport people's mind from the narrow, impersonal bore of a magnetic resonance imaging (IMR), magnet sound, and language.

Movie has many different genres (Hoang, 2018). One of well-known genre is educational genre. Freedom Writers is one of educational movie. It is a 2007 American movie directed by Richard LaGrevenese and distributed by Paramount Pictures. The occurrences depicted in the Freedom Writers movie are based on a real incident that occurred in the city of Long Beach, California, in the United State of America in 1994. The film centers on Erin Gruwell, a new teacher, who works with a "chaotic and disorderly" class of high school students who bring racial tension into the classroom. The title Freedom Writers is derived from the movie's plot. Where Erin gave books to each of her student and frees her them to use any stories they want to write in the book. From the students' narratives, Erin then recognizes the students' issues and acts to address them.

The use of movies as a source of data in research occurs in various fields. Movie can be analyzed in various directions, according to the researcher's objectives or to the objectives of a particular field of interest (Isboli, Pepece, & Gaiotto, 2017). Freedom Writers is one of the films that has been widely used as a research object. Freedom Writers movie has been used for research in various fields, including language and education. Zulfian, Sahril, & Omulu (2018) and Nurwidya (2021) have discussed the teaching and learning strategies used in Freedom Writer movie. Leihitu and Triprihatmini (2021) identified and described the politeness strategies used in teaching process in the movie. Aronson (2017) and Cammarota (2011) discussed about the white savior in education of this movie. Hidayati (2017) discussed the appraisal analysis of the film. Mulyani & Latifah (2018) then used Freedom Writers to analyze the speech acts contained within it.

Beside the research mentioned above, there are still many studies that have been conducted using this movie. As previously mentioned, Freedom Writers movie has been used as an object of research in many studies, both research conducted by Indonesian researchers and by researchers from various countries. However, there is no research on this movie that discusses speech functions.

D. Speech Function in Movies

The objects of speech function analysis can be various. It can be in the form of news articles, short stories, speeches, novels, comics, and other objects that enable a conversation. One of the objects that can be analyzed for speech function is a movie. In the movie, the use of the speech function is very visible because movie contains interactions that allow the discourse to be analyzed from the conversations in the movie. Analyzing speech function in the movie is very relevant because the movie consists of conversations that certainly have commodity exchanges in it.

Conversation in movies normally can indicate that every word someone says can affect the listener. It is known as regulatory. Halliday's theory, which Brown (1983) subsequently expanded, also describes this regulating role, although it is distinct from the theory applied in this study. According to a number of studies, including by Supriyati (2015), based on the research which use descriptive qualitative method, in the movie the regulatory function is dominating. This is because basically, encounters between people in daily life frequently have an impact on one another, as the movies illustrates.

In daily human encounters, people also often exchange information. Someone brings information in the form of describing something, confirming something, explaining something, etc. This also happens in interactions in movies. According to Holmes' theory, this is called referential function. Wijayanti and Chasanah (2021) in their researches which used qualitative research and took descriptive method found that referential is the highest function found in movies according to Holmes' theory. This is because, just like in real life, every character in a movie wants to share their knowledge or information.

Concerning sharing the knowledge and information, in research by Syamsiyah (2018) obtained similar results. Using the content analysis of qualitative research method, in her research it was found that statement was the most widely used type. This is due to the tendency of everyone to give information.

From several previous studies presented above, it is obvious that using movie for object analysis of speech function is not a novel concept. Movie is used as the object of speech function research since they contain communicative patterns that may be analyzed. In the English language, American and British communicative patterns are frequently used as an analytical model and highly beneficial as a basis trend of analysis on other languages (Kharkovskaya, Ponomarenko, & Radyuk, 2017). As a result, this study examines the speech function of an American movie.

Speech function which is part of discourse analysis is a subsystem of English language and speech. It would be inaccurate to teach language in a communicative approach without considering the discourse analysis (Schiffrin, Tannen, & Hamilton, 2005). This is the reason analysis of speech function is required. Furthermore, appropriate settings in discourse analysis are required to generate a learning environment in which language acquisition and language development can occur from a communicative standpoint (Schiffrin, Tannen, & Hamilton, 2005).

CHAPTER III

RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

This chapter focuses on the methodology of this research. This chapter consists of the research design, data source, and data analysis procedure.

A. Research Design

This study employed qualitative research with content analysis as the method. According to Weber (1990), as cited in Gheyle & Jacobs (2017), qualitative content analysis focuses on semantic linkages rather than words, it focuses on the meaning behind the text. It does more than merely count words or columns but categorizes the body of text while paying close attention to the meaning. Krippendorff (2013) argues that ultimately, all readings of texts are qualitative, even when certain features of a text are converted into numbers, and content analysis is a research technique used to explore the nature, characteristics, and meaning of texts or other relevant objects and make inferences that are replicable and valid in the context of their use.

The research in this study was undertaken by focusing on analyzing each utterance rather than just seeing it as a word or sentence. The utterances that have been meaning-analyzed are then classified into the same and appropriate kinds. In this study, the utterances examined are classified into speech functions then inferences are generated based on the findings. Therefore, a qualitative content analysis method is suitable for this study.

B. Data Sources

Data source is the field where the data can be found or may be accessed (Arikunto, 2013). The source of this study comes from the script of Freedom Writers movie which is the film can be watched on amazon at the link:

<https://www.amazon.com/Freedom-Writers-Will-Morales/dp/B000PH8MEE>

The script of the movie can be downloaded at the following link:

https://www.scripts.com/script/freedom\_writers\_8571

Freedom Writers is a 2007 American movie distributed by Paramount Pictures. The data is in the form of the variation of utterances that are contained in the movie. The conversations encountered in the movie script were analysed by separating utterances into initial speech functions and responding speech functions according to the aim of this study. This kind of analysis is included in discourse analysis.

Discourse analysis is a way or method to examine the discourse contained in communication messages both textually and contextually. Discourse analysis allows us to see how messages are organized, used, and understood. In this study, the analysis focuses on initial speech function (statement, question, command, and offer) and responding speech function (supporting and confronting).

C. Data Analysis Procedure

This study followed the research pattern of Sihura (2019), which also employed content analysis in previous studies. In that study, content analysis was carried out utilizing several procedures suggested by Gay, Mills, and Airasian (2012), namely memoing/reading, describing, and classifying.

In analysing data, the researcher must familiarise themselves with the data, the researcher must re-read the entire text to be analysed to obtain an appropriate understanding. In the second step, each unit/utterance of the entire text must be understood according to the context and then its type is determined. Unimportant data can be removed to make it easier for researchers to continue the analysis. Then, the data that has been analysed is grouped and classified into the same category. The researcher may present a summary of classified data as a table to enable the reader to get a snapshot of the results.

CHAPTER IV

FINDINGS AND DISCUSSION

In this chapter, there are two major topics to be examined, which are research findings and discussion. The research findings present the type of initial speech functions and responding speech functions were used during the teacher-student interactions shown in the movie. Then, in the discussion, it focuses on how the findings relate to other literary sources.

A. Research Findings

This study aims at analyzing the types of initial speech function and responding speech function in Freedom Writers movie. The data used in this research were derived from variation of utterances in the form of the movie script. All of the data taken is limited on analyzing the teacher-students interaction in the movie. All of the selected data were analyzed and classified based on Halliday's speech function theory (2014) which divides speech function into four initial functions which are statement, question, command, and offer; and, eight responding speech function which are divided into supporting and confronting speech function. Supporting speech function covers acknowledgement, answer, compliance, and acceptance; meanwhile, confronting speech function includes contradiction, disclaimer, refusal, and rejection.

Furthermore, as previously stated, the interaction that was analyzed from the script was only the interaction between teachers and students; therefore, the interactants are Erin as a teacher and 11 of her students. To make it easier in recognizing the data, the teacher is coded with the letter (T) and the student with the letter (S). S1 stands for student 1, S2 for student 2, and so forth. Moreover, not all encounters include one-on-one interactions. Occasionally, one teacher may interact with all of the students. In light of this, the AS code is assigned to refer to a move made by all students. In addition, the types of the mood also appear in the finding table below. Providing the mood types do to the speech function is somehow closely associated with that particular grammatical structure. Statements are most naturally expressed by declarative clauses, questions by interrogative, and commands with imperative. However, it is important to stress that the natural meaning pairing mentioned above do not always occur.

1. The Types of Initial Speech Function

As previously mentioned, the process of classifying the data was based on Halliday's theory (2014). The initial speech function consists of statement, question, command, and offer. The following table presents details frequency of overall number of initial speech functions produced by each speaker.

Tabel 4.1Frequency of Initial Speech Function Produced by Each Speaker*

	Speaker	Initial Speech Function
		Statement	Question	Command	Offer
1	T	111	50	55	1
2	S1	29	10	-	-
3	S2	8	2	1	1
4	S3	1	1	1	-
5	S4	4	4	-	-
6	S5	2	1	-	-
7	S6	1	2	-	-
8	S7	1	3	-	-
9	S8	3	-	-	-
10	S9	1	2	-	-
11	S10	0	-	-	-
12	S11	3	-	-	-
13	AS	0	-	-	-
Total		164	79	57	2

Furthermore, the total frequency of the types of initial speech function and the types of mood that exist in the Freedom Writers movie were measured and presented by dividing it into teacher utterances and adding up all students' utterances in the following table.

Tabel 4.2

Total Frequency of Initial Speech Function Based on Types of the Mood

Types of Speech Function	Speaker	Types of the Mood
		Dec	Int	Imp
Q	T	19	27	0
	S	6	18	1
C	T	17	0	38

Based on the table above, all the types of initial speech functions proposed by Halliday (2014) clearly exist in the teacher-students interaction in the Freedom Writers movie. From the table provided, it could be concluded that in the movie, statement is the initial speech function that is the most frequently utilized in the study's movie which reach more than half of all the initial utterances. The question appears the second most appearances with approximately a quarter of the initial utterances. Then, it is followed by command in the third position and the last one belongs to offer with 2 utterances.

After analyzing the teacher-student conversation in the movie script, it was found that all of the types of initial speech function, which are statement, question, command, and offer, appear in the Freedom Writers movie script. Below is presented some data from each speech function; however, in order to make it easy in recognizing the data of the script, the data have been codified first. The codification in the research is explained as following: the letter (S) stands for the word scene which is followed with a number without brackets (e.g. 1) to refer to a specific scene in the movie. After that, the scene code is followed with another number and a letter in brackets (for example, 1a); the number marks the turn in the conversation and the letter marks the move. Furthermore, the code of the move is divided into two: the letter (a) for initial speech function and the letter (b) for responding speech function. Therefore, if the data code is S.6.(2a), then based on the code, it signifies that the utterance taken is from scene 6, the second turn, and initial speech function.

The following samples of the result analysis are divided based on the types of initial speech function produced in the teacher-student interaction in the studied movie.

1.a. Statement

From the results of the analysis, it was found that the data of statement in the analysis result is 164 utterances. Specifically, 155 statements were in form of declarative, which was 104 spoken by teacher and 51 spoken by students. There was also 1 utterance that informs a statement, yet it was in imperative form and was spoken by the teacher. Here are several samples of utterances produced by speakers in the Freedom Writers movie whose speech function belong to the statement type.

1. S.12.(33a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:33:37	Statement	S1	33a	I saw white cops break into my house and take my father for no reason except because they feel like it!

The utterance above shows 'statement' speech function which was spoken by S1 aiming to provide information. The speaker uttered the sentence to describe what she had seen. The sentence served as a means of communicating details about what speaker saw. Speech roles and commodity exchange occurs is giving information. As often closely associated with particular grammatical structure, this statement is naturally express declarative mood.

2. S.6.(1a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:14:19	Statement	T	1a	Homer's The Odyssey

In the sample above, the teacher utters a sentence in the form of a statement. The sentence is information that delivered to the students. The speech role of giving information has happened here. However, the utterance does not belong to any form in mood types because it does not fulfill the appropriate grammatical structure.

3. S.9.(5a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:20:48	Statement	T	5a	See, what I was trying to do...

The excerpt above shows the speech function of the statement used by teacher. In that sentence, teacher wants to give an explanation or information. Even though it contains sentence to explain, the grammatical structure shows a mood with an imperative type. This happens because the teacher gives emphasis before the explanatory sentence.

1.b. Question

Question appears when the speaker or the writer is demanding information from the interlocutors. In the analysis results, it was found that the data of question is 70 utterances. Particularly, 25 questions in form of declarative, which was 19 question uttered by teacher and 6 question uttered by students. 45 questions in form of interrogative, which was 27 uttered by teacher and 18 uttered by students. And there was also 1 question in form of imperative which was uttered by student. Here are some examples of question produced by speaker.

1. S.41.(4a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:43:23	Question	S7	4a	Are we gonna have this same room next year again?

The utterance above shows that the student giving a question and expecting the answer from the teacher. The speech role of this utterance is demanding information. In the form of speech function types, it is clearly question type. In addition, in the form of mood types, the grammatical structure shown is interrogative. In this way it is known that the example shown above is a general form of a question which is naturally expressed by interrogative.

2. S.12.(14a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:30:33	Question	T	14a	You think you know all about gangs?

The sample of utterance above it would be most likely to be taken as a question because it has a question mark there. The question teacher gave aiming to elicit the answer 'yes'. In other words, the question is delivered without expecting an answer because the answer is often already known by the questioner. This is a reasonably typical form-function pairing in some contexts which is called queclarative.

3. S.31.(3a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:19:31	Question	S1	3a	Take him out?

From the excerpt above, it is found that student asking a question to the teacher. The student demanding the information for what she asked, so that demanding information is a speech role of this utterance. Even though the utterance uses the question mark at the end, the form of grammatical structure shows that the utterance is in the form of imperative.

1.c. Offer

Offer is an expression means willing to serve or to inform someone. In this movie studied, it is found 2 utterances of offer. 1 offer is in form of declarative which was delivered by teacher and 1 another question is in form of interrogative was delivered by student. Here are the excerpts of the offer.

1. S.39.(2a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:34:28	Offer	T	2a	And I can even drive you to your aunt's, if it gets too late.

The sample of the offer above shows that the teacher make an offer to the student to take her if it's too late. The speech roles and commodity of this utterance is giving goods & services. This offer utterance is in the form of declarative mood.

2. S.32.(10a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:22:27	Offer	S2	10a	Ms. G, when Miep Gies come, can I, like, be the one to escort her in?

Different from the first sample of offer, this sample is in the form of interrogative. The student asks to the teacher if he can escort Miep Gies. Even though it uses a question mark in the sentence, the speech role shows the sentence is giving service because the student offers the service. So, the form of the utterance is offer

1.d. Command

In a discourse, a command is used to demand goods and services. It could be said that the purpose of a command is to request someone to do an action. In a command, demanding goods and services is its commodities exchanged. Based on the result of analysis, it was found that the data of command in the movie studied is 57 utterances. In specific, 17 commands were in form of declarative, which was delivered by teacher. 40 other questions were in form of imperative which 38 questions were delivered by teacher and 2 questions were delivered by students. Some examples of commands are showed below.

1. S.12.(49a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:36:01	Command	T	49a	Raise your hand if you wanna know what Holocause is.

In the utterance above, the students were asked to raise their hands if they want to know about the Holocause. The teacher asked the students to do something, which in this case was raising their hands. Then, students are required to carry out the order. It shows the speech role in this utterance is demanding goods & services. The form of mood types of this utterance is imperative.

2. S.28.(1a)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:10:17	Command	T	1a	I want each of you to step forward and take one of these Borders bags, which contain the four books we're gonna read this semester. All right!

The excerpt above shows that the speech function used by the teacher is a command which could be seen that teacher requested service from the student. The utterance I want you to... shows that the teacher wants the students to do something. Students are required to carry out the sentences spoken. However, the grammatical structure of this command was in form of declarative.

2. The Types of Responding Speech Function

In general, apart from the initial speech function, Halliday (2014) also divided the speech function into responding speech functions. This responding speech function is examined from the addressee's response to the initial speech function. Responding speech function is divided into supporting and confronting speech function. Supporting speech function contains acknowledgement, answer, compliance, and acceptance, in contrast to that, confronting speech function consist of contradiction, disclaimer, refusal, and rejection. The table below shows the detail frequency of responding speech function utterance by each speaker.

Tabel 4.3

Frequency of Responding Speech Function Produced by Each Speaker

	Speaker	Responding Speech Function

In addition, the total frequency of types of responding speech function and the types of mood that exist in the Freedom Writers movie were presented in the subsequent table.

Tabel 4.4

Table above shows various forms of responding speech function by Halliday (2014). It could be seen that in the result of analysis of movie studied, answer is the most dominating of all type form the whole responding speech function appears. The second position is acknowledgment with the difference of 10 fewer utterances then the answer. Then, it was followed by disclaimer in the third position and the disclaimer as the fourth position. Next, there is refusal and followed by rejection which reach less than 10 utterances for each. Besides, the types of acceptance and compliance are not found in the teacher-student conversation in the related movie.

In the Freedom Writers movie, only six of the eight varieties of responding speech function are existent: answer, acknowledgement, disclaimer, contradiction, refusal, and rejection. All of the example of the each responding speech function which exists in the result of analysis of the studied movie can be seen below.

2.a Answer

The answer is a type of question-response that is regarded as revealing the supporting to the question's response. Answering takes place when the speaker or writer invites the interlocutor to give information and the interlocutor complies by providing appropriate data. From the result of analysis, it was found that the data of answer is 28 utterances. Specifically, 27 answers in form of statement which are 12 utterances were spoken by teacher and 14 utterances were spoken by students. However, there was 1 other answer which has no form of mood. The speaker in the Freedom Writers movie provided the following examples of the responding speech function of answer.

1. S.12.(21b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:32:04	Question	T	20a	So what you're saying is, if the Latinos weren't here, or the Cambodians or the blacks or the whites or whoever they are, if they weren't here, everything would be better for you, isn't that right?
0:32:12	Answer	AS	21b	Of course it'd be better!

The sample above shows that the speech function 'answer' which is used by the students is responding to the teacher's question. The student's provide the information asked by the speaker. The student emphatically replied that it was true; the students felt everything would be better if there were no other races in the environment. The type of mood of this answer is declarative.

2. S.28.(6b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:12:42	Question	S9	5a	Ms. G, Can I read something from my diary?
1:12:45	Answer	T	6b	That'd be great.

The excerpt above shows another example from answer. In that excerpt student asked the teacher for information about reading diaries, then the teacher answered the question straightforwardly. The teacher provided the information that the questioner expected. This answer is in form of declarative.

3. S.4.(8b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:10:47	Question	T	7a	Are you Jamal?
0:10:48	Answer	S3	8b	Yeah.

In the third sample, a student's name was verified by the teacher by asking him. Then the student responded to the teacher's query. Despite the fact that the question was addressed, the student's response did not fit any particular mood when analyzed in terms of grammatical structure.

2.b Acknowledgement

Acknowledgment is a type of statement response that is seen as a statement's supporting speech in response. It signifies that the information or ideas the speaker communicated through the statement are acknowledged and received favorably. In the result of the analysis, it was discovered that there were 17 utterances of acknowledgement. In specific, it was found 12 acknowledgement of declarative. Of which 3 declarative were spoken by teacher and 9 declaratives were spoken by students. Then, 1 utterance in form of interrogative which was delivered by the teacher, also, it was found 1 acknowledgement was in forms of imperative which was delivered by teacher. Besides, there 3 other utterances of acknowledgement are not in form of any particular mood types. Here are some utterances from speakers in the Freedom Writer movie that shows the acknowledgement.

1. S.28.(8b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:14:39	Statement	S9	7a	"I am home."
1:14:42	Acknowledgement	T	8b	Yes, you are.

Explanation of acknowledgment is to provide a response in the form of supporting a statement. On the sample above, teacher accepted the student's statement and responded with a statement of support with the sentence yes, you are which means the teacher stated that what student stated was true. The mood type of this acknowledgement is declarative.

2. S.12.(8b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:28:44	Statement	S8	4a	It got torn out.
0:28:46	Acknowledgement	T	5b	Okay, why don't you just use the next blank page?

The sample shows when there is a statement from the student, the teacher provides supporting responses in the form of acknowledgement. The teacher's answer is still in the form of a supporting response even though it is not in a declarative form. In this sample, the grammatical structure of this acknowledgment is interrogative.

3. S.12.(5b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:29:57	Statement	S11	7a	Maybe we should get her to come and speak.
0:29:59	Acknowledgement	S6	8b	Yeah, have a big dinner again.

In this excerpt s11 gave a statement about inviting someone to their school. The statement was approved by another student by saying a supporting sentence which grammatically is in the form of an imperative.

4. S.41.(22b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:43:14	Statement	S1	21a	Ms. G, this is our kick-it spot.
1:43:16	Acknowledgement	AS	22b	Yeah,

In this excerpt s1 gives a statement. The statement then received support from all students. Students provide a supporting response by saying 'yeah'. This supporting sentence grammatically does not have a mood forms.

2.c Disclaimer

Disclaimer is a question response that is thought to as a confrontational question responding. It indicates that the interlocutor responds negatively to the query or even refuses to answer that the speaker asked in their question. In the result of this study, it was found that there are 11 disclaimers. 6 of disclaimers were in the form of declarative which 5 of them were uttered by teacher and 1 uttered by students. 2 disclaimers were in the form of interrogative which were uttered by students. 2 disclaimers were in the form of imperative which were also uttered by students. Also, 1 another disclaimer was not in any particular mood and it was uttered by students. Below are some samples of the disclaimer.

1. S.31.(6b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:10:00	Question	S1	5a	Are Anne and Peter gonna hook up?
1:10:01	Disclaimer	T	6b	I'm not telling you.

The conversation above shows a case of disclaimer since the teacher refused to provide the requested information. The sentence "I'm not telling you" means that the teacher simply refuses to give the requested answer. The disclaimer in this sample was in the form of declarative

2. S.12. (6b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:29:18	Question	T	5a	What is this?
0:29:19	Disclaimer	S3	6b	Just leave it alone.

There is a disclaimer sentence in this excerpt since the addressee refused to answer. The disclaimer exists since the addressee does not provide the information asked and instead asks the speaker not to discuss it with the phrase "just leave it...". The student gave a confronting response by saying the sentence in the imperative form.

3. S.31. (7b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
-------------	------------------------	----------------	------------------	------------------

1:20:28	Question	T	6a	Eva, what's wrong?
1:20:29	Disclaimer	S1	7b	Why didn't you tell me she dies?

The disclaimer in this sample can be found since the student does not answer the question asked. Instead of giving an answer, the student gave a confronting response by giving an interrogative sentence.

4. S.15. (6b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:43:19	Question	T	5a	How many of you are gang members?
0:43:22	Disclaimer	AS	6b	Nice try.

The disclaimer in this passage can be found in the phrase “nice try”. The phrasing demonstrates that the students did not respond to the information asked. Nice try in this context refers to an effort that was made, but you were unable to obtain the information you sought. The utterance of disclaimer in this sample grammatically has not the mood types.

2.d Contradiction

Contradiction is a type of speech function that is used to respond to a statement that is being confronted. The speaker's information or ideas are being responded to negatively in this way. It was discovered that there were 15 utterances of contradiction in the result of analysis. 12 contradictions were in the form of declarative, which 3 utterances were uttered by teacher and 9 utterances were uttered by students. 1 contradiction was in the form of interrogative which was delivered by student. 1 contradiction was in the form of imperative which was spoken by student. Also, there was 1 another contradiction has no form of mood which was delivered by students.

1. S.12. (23b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:32:20	Statement	T	22a	It starts with a drawing like this, and then some kid dies in a drive-by, never even knowing what hit him.
0:32:38	Contradiction	S1	23b	You don't know nothing!

The contradiction in the dialogue piece was found in the sentence of denial spoken by the student. The sentence You don't know nothing! Student said meant that the student did not agree with the teacher's statement. Student stated that teacher's statement made no sense because teacher didn't even understand that. The form of contradiction here is clearly visible from the denial sentence. The contradiction in this excerpt was in form of declarative.

2. S.41. (10b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
-------------	------------------------	----------------	------------------	------------------

1:43:46	Statement	T	9a	I thought you guys understood that.
1:43:50	Contradiction	AS	10b	What? What are you talking about?

In this sample, students respond to statements with the sentence "what? what are you talking about?" This utterance means that the students do not agree with the statement made by the teacher. The student's response is a confronting response in the form of an interrogative mood.

3. S.9. (4b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:20:17	Statement	T	3a	What he does is very sophisticated and cool, actually.
0:20:45	Contradiction	S4	4b	Think we don't know 2Pac?

In the conversational excerpt above, the teacher is shown giving information. The teacher makes a statement, to which the class responds negatively. Because it contradicts the prior assertion, the reaction is regarded as negative. What actually happened was that students responded with displeasure used grammatically imperative mood utterance.

4. S.46. (2b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:50:48	Statement	T	1a	But it's been decided we can't continue with each other junior year.

1:50:50	Contradiction	AS	2b	What?

---

The student responds with "what?" after the teacher makes a statement. What is meant by "what" in this context is the student's denial of the prior statement. "What" prompts a confronting response. Contradiction is the response to a statement that takes the form of confrontation. In this case, the contradiction is only a single word, which when examined grammatically does not reveal the mood type.

2.e Rejection

Rejection is declining. Rejection is an act of turning down what is provided, given, or offered. In the result of the analysis, it is found only 1 utterance of rejection. This rejection was in the form of imperative which was uttered by student.

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
1:35:15	Offer	T	2a	And I can even drive you to your aunt's, if it gets too late.
1:35:21	Rejection	S1	3b	Ms. G, let's not get nuts.

The sample above shows an example of rejection because when the teacher makes an offer, the student does not respond by agreeing, instead the student says let's not get nuts. The sentence is in the form of an imperative with the intention of not giving a supporting response.

2.f Refusal

Refusal is the confrontational response to a command. Refusal arises when the person who is required to do something or to give something does not directly do the thing ordered, but instead denies what is ordered. In this study it was found 5 example of refusal speech function. 2 refusals was in form of declarative which delivered by students. 1 refusal was in form of interrogative which was delivered by students. Another 1 refusal was not in any form of mood which was also delivered by students. Here are some samples of refusal.

1. S.6. (6b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:15:10	Command	T	5a	Jamal. Jamal. Get her backpack.
0:15:13	Refusal	S3	6b	I didn't do nothing anyway!

The refusal is indicated by the sentence the student used in the dialogue above. The student does not obey orders when receives it, hence this happens. In actuality, the student gave denial sentence. In this instance, it is then classified as a responding speech function in the form of refusal. This refusal utterance was in the form of declarative.

2. S.12. (2b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:28:15	Command	T	1a	Gloria, Please read the first sentence on the board.

0:28:17 Refusal S8 2b Why me?

The conversation above shows refusal because it contains confronting commands. The sentence why me? in the discourse above is classified into a form of rebuttal to the order given. The orders given were not immediately accepted but were instead questioned beforehand in an unpleasant way. The refusal in this sample was in form of interrogative.

3. S.9. (8b)

Time	Speech Function	Speaker	Turn/move	Utterance
0:21:03	Command	T	7a	You know what? I want you to move to this front seat right here now.
0:21:06	Refusal	AS	8b	What?

Refusal in this instance occurs when students are given instructions but do not adhere to instructions. Student actually protested to the order by saying “what?” besides making unpleasant gestures and facial expressions. The word “what?” in this example was a refusal which was not in form of any types of mood.

As shown in the preceding table, all of the initial speech functions types exist in the analysis result. But out of the eight responding speech functions types, it is known that there two types do not exist in the analysis result. Particularly, they are acceptance and compliance. While six other types namely answer, acknowledgment, disclaimer, contradiction, rejection and refusal were found in the analysis results

B. Discussion

This section discusses the research findings based on the data that have been reported in preceding section. As already mentioned, there are two research questions that were addressed in this study. Specifically, the type of initial speech function used and the type of responding speech function used in the Freedom Writers movie accordance with Halliday's theory.

Regarding the types of initial speech function, the result of the findings confirms that all initial speech functions exist in the studied movie. It is known that statement is the most dominant type of initial speech function found. Then, it is followed by a question in the second most common order.

The study's finding shows that since the analyzing is from teacher-student interaction, it is very reasonable that the highest initial speech function is a statement. Many statements uttered by the teacher. This is influenced because the teacher provides a lot of information during the teaching and learning process. As stated by Indari, et al. (2019) in their study in which the study focused on speech function in the classroom, the results of the study which using the similar theory of Halliday (2014) found that statements are the highest speech function found from the results of the analysis. According to Indari et al (2019) this is because the goals of the teaching and learning process are to clearly communicate the information.

Although the statement in this study is dominated by teachers, the reason is not because the teacher is superior, as stated by Holmes (2013), that the choice of language variation can show the status or level of one's position in society. In this study, language variation is also influenced by context and situation (Van Dijk, 2006). Where, in the chosen subject, the students do not consider the teacher to be in a higher position. This can be seen from S.12.(26a) where a student said "why should I give my respect to you? 'cause you're a teacher? I don't know you" which then another student gave acknowledgment on it.

After the statement which is the most type exists in the initial speech function then it is followed by question in the second order. According to the results of Lestari's study (2019) the number of question types of initial speech function found in the teaching and learning process is due to the initial speech function of question being conducted to stimulate the student in the class. This reason is similar to this study. Besides that, question is also used to ensure students focus and understand the material presented. This is in line with what Reeve and Jang (2006) mentioned, that one of the instructional behaviors used by teachers to regulate student behavior is asking controlling questions.

While in the second research question, it was asked that the type of the responding speech function used in Freedom Writers movie. The results showed that there are two types that are not found in responding speech function, specifically acceptance and compliance. The responding speech function is dominated by answers as the most commonly found type.

In line with this research which discusses initial speech function and responding speech function, the results of a similar study regarding the most dominant types of responding speech function were found in study by Anugratamur (2013) a study conducted by Anugratamur focused on the speech function in the comic entitled Conan. In this study it was also found that answer was the most dominant types exist of the responding speech function, which was then followed by acknowledgments in the second order. In this study, the percentage of answers is influenced by the running of the teaching process. According to Supika (2017), this includes the process category and context category in learning. According to Gage (2004), there are 4 variables in the conception of teaching, namely the presage category, context category, process category, and product.

Highlighting the responding speech function, in this result finding it was discovered that acceptance was not found affected by the number of offer made, which were in fact extremely low. In the meantime, there was no evidence of compliance since when the respondent gave a supporting response of the command. The respondent frequently carried it out right away without saying anything. This is in accordance with what Thompson (2014) said that these two things happen because commands usually need to be spoken but the response is not necessary, while offers can be made without using language.

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND RECOMMENDATIONS

This chapter comes up with the conclusions and recommendations of the research. The conclusion is based on the previous chapter's research findings and discussion. This section summarizes the data analysis and discussion. Meanwhile the recommendation includes some ideas and suggestions that will be useful for future research.

A. Conclusion

This study seeks to identify the types of speech function that can be found in a movie script. To prevent distortion in the research findings, the subject of this interpersonal meaning analysis is restricted to teacher-student interaction. This study, which was based on Halliday's theory (2014), was done to examine the kind of speech function in each utterance. The conclusion divided into two topics: the initial speech function and the responding speech function employed in the Freedom Writers movie.

First, the movie has samples of all four categories of initial speech functions. The most frequent form of initial speech function is statement. The reason of the varied occurrence frequency of speech function and mood types is determined by the position or profession of the interactant. Normally, the interaction that drives the teacher-student scene influences the teacher's aim position to convey a lot of information in the form of a statement and declarative mood. On the other hand, information may be communicated by student occasionally, but it usually takes the form of interrogative mood. Every utterance has a purpose and a position of interactant which have a significant impact on the speech function and mood type emerges.

Then the second, on this movie, responding speech function is dominated by answer as the most prevalent type. From eight types of responding speech function, this movie does not contain either of the two types, acceptance and compliance. This is happened due to the number of offer made and the fact that command might be responded to discreetly.

B. Recommendation

This study proved that the use of speech functions is highly influenced by the circumstances and interactants involved. Therefore, it is important to have a solid understanding of speech function in order to increase consciousness of the implications of the theory so that people are more aware of choosing appropriate utterances which are employed both in educational context as well as in day-to-day language use. It is essential to keep in mind that speech functions are important to both educational theory and practice. It is not just a linguistic component to add color and aesthetics to language, but rather a salient feature of discourse.

This study limited on analysis the use of speech functions in conversation by native speakers in American movie. However, given that language is much more than external expression and internal thoughts that are communicated but also as anthropologists say that language is related to culture, it would be interesting if the future researcher conducts a comprehensive study of the speech functions utilized in conversation by Easterners. This needs to be done to see if there are significant differences in how Westerners and Easterners use speech functions, which is intended to assist everyone adjust when communicating with people from various cultures so that misconceptions do not occur.

T		15a	See, they'd print pictures like this in the newspapers. Jewish people with big, long noses. Blacks with big, fat lips.	Dec	S
T		15a	They'd also publish scientific evidence that proved Jews and blacks were the lowest form of human species Jews and blacks were more like animals.	Dec	S
T		15a	And because they were just like animals it didn't really matter whether they lived or died.	Dec	S
T		15a	In fact, life would be a whole lot better if they were all dead.	Dec	S
T		15a	That's how a holocaust happens.	Dec	S

AS	0:32:12	20b	Of course it'd be better!	Dec		Ans

S4	0:33:06	26a	How do I know you're not a liar standing up there?	Int	Q
S4		26a	How do I know you're not a bad person standing up there?	Int	Q
S4	0:33:09	26a	I'm not just gonna give you my respect because you're called a teacher.	Dec	S
S1	0:33:12	27a	White people always want their respected like they deserve it for free.	Dec	S
